Recording the Pandemic

We are using webcrawling technology to take weekly snapshots of the coronavirus related pages on the Dorset Council and Bournemouth, Christchurch and Poole Council websites. The webpages describe the impact of the virus on local services and reflect the changing national advice.

Once captured, the archived webpages are safely stored in our digital preservation system. Details of the webpages are added to our catalogue for researchers to find. This work has been recognised by The National Archives in this year's case studies.

Corona Diaries

In April we had over 150 people volunteer to be part of our Corona Diaries campaign! The diarists are recording their experiences of life in the time of COVID-19, and we will collect and keep their diaries for future research and use.

Caring for the Collections

Our Conservator has worked on two large projects this year: conserving fragile documents for the Harrison Hospital Project funded by the Wellcome Trust, such as this medical journal; and preparing items for display in the new galleries at Dorset County Museum.

Volunteering

The pandemic had a huge impact on our volunteering teams. Many of whom saw their usual role disappear or be severely curtailed. However, our oral history and Letters Live volunteers have been able to work remotely via Teams and taught us new ways to collaborate online.

Elisabeth Frink Project

We completed the bulk of the cataloguing of world-renowned sculptor Dame Elisabeth Frink's archive and supplied content to an important exhibition of the artist's work at Messums, Wiltshire.

2020 Year in Review

2020 will be remembered for the challenges brought about by the Covid pandemic. However, much activity still went on behind the scenes at Dorset History Centre. We'd like to share with you some of the highlights.

Working Together

We have forged close links with both Bournemouth and Exeter universities and have signed a Memorandum of Understanding with each to support partnership working. The service has also been working hard to collect in the records of the nine councils that existed before Local Government Reorganisation in 2019.

Museums

We worked with Dorset's 28 Accredited museums to support them with the organisational, logistical and financial challenges caused by Covid. So far, over £3 million of emergency funding has been sourced to help secure their future.

Fundraising for Hardy

With Dorset Archives Trust, we raised, via grant applications and crowd-funding, an incredible £50,000 to purchase an important archive of Thomas Hardy's manuscripts and printed books.

Reopening the Archive

In July we reopened to the public after lockdown with new rules and restrictions. Following this reopening, we were fully booked every week until November, helping people undertake their research safely!

Bridging the Gap

We are delighted to be hosting a Digital Archive Trainee as part of The National Archives' Bridging the Digital Gap programme. The programme aims to bring new perspectives into the archive sector. We look forward to working with our Trainee Eimear from January 2021!

New Accessions

Despite the pandemic and closure of DHC, we took in 210 new accessions over 2020. One was the archive of the former Beales Department Stores.

Following announcements that Beales was experiencing financial difficulties and set to close for good, we made urgent approaches to the administrators about saving the collection. The archive was collected from the Bournemouth store on the company's last day of trading in March 2020 - a day before the first lockdown.
